Captors Say 'Pressures' Endanger 50 Hostages

AMMAN, Sept. 14.-Still holding "about 50" hostages after releasing most passengers of the four jetliners it hijacked last week, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine today issued a mixture of threats and blandishments to Western powers and organizations seeking the remaining captives' release.

Singled out for bellicose warpings were the United States and ael. The PFLP blamed "American pressure" for the failure so far of negotiations toward the release of the remaining hostages. It warned that any U.S. attempt to intervene—directly by force, instead of negotiating through the International Red Cross—would "endanger their lives." It said it would treat Americans among the remaining captives "the same as the Israeli hostages."

The Front also warned Israel to free some 450 Arabs rounded up on the West Bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza Strip or face "unimaginable reprisals." A PFLP spokesman in Beirut threatened that the Arabs' 50-odd hostages faced "harsh measures" unless the 450 Arabs were released. Early today, the Front appealed to the International Red Cross to resume negotiations, in which the guerrillas hope to win the free-dom of seven commandos held in Western Europe and of an unspecified number of guerrillas held by Israel before its weekend roundup of the 450.

U.S. to Use Computers, $15 Rewards To Catch, Help Capture Deserters

WASHINGTON. Sept. 14 (UPI).—The Pentagon said today it will start using computers and cash rewards in dealing with deserters and servicemen who go Absent Without Official Leave

New regulations, signed Aug. 24 by Deputy Defense Secretary David Packard, for the first time brought all branches of the armed forces under a unified system for handling deserters and those who are AWOL, a Pentagon spokesman said.

Under the new rules, a deserter is classified as anyone who is AWOL for more than 30 days, is absent for any period when guilty of a violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice or who seeks asylum in a foreign country.

A servicemen is considered AWOL under the new rules when he is absent without authority for fewer than 30 days. The regulations set up a $15 cash reward for the apprehension and detention of absentees, deserters or escaped prisoners. They also set a reward of $25 for anyone capturing and returning to the military an absentee or deserter. Mr. Packard said a computer link will be established between each branch of the service and the Federal Bureau of Investigation National Crime Record System "in order to provide the means for making timely and complete deserter information available to civil law enforcement agencies.

Although this location was being considered at the time of your recent visit, the decision to purchase had not yet been made. Before making this decision, we gave careful consideration, as we always do, to the advantages and disadvantages of a number of locations. The site near Bordeaux appeared, for several reasons, to be the best for our present purposes.

I am sorry that we could not take advantage of your suggestion, but we shall keep it in mind if, at any time in the future, it appears desirable to undertake an additional expansion of our activities in France.

Escalation of Terror

The hijackings to Jordan have produced & worldwide revulsion and set up strains within the commando movement and the Arab world generally. They have not yet affected seriously the ad-hoc union of the four Western countries whose citizens are being held for political ransom. But Israel has rounded up 450 Arabs in territories it controis-apparently as counter-nostages.

Whether this will worsen the situation of the passengers and crew still held by the guerrillas is not yet clear. The Western states have very carefully abstained from threats or acts that might be construed as reprisals; the one point they have tried to make clear is that Arab terrorists in their hands will be released—but only on condition that the whole group of hostages is also released. Even the destruction of the four planes outside Amman, although it was a clear act of bad faith on the part of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, did not affect that stand fundamentally.

The Israeli move throws fresh doubt on the already very dubious state of negotiations with the commandos, and thus on the fate of the hostages. But there is no doubt whatever that, in the usual style of acts of terror, the hijackings have led to an escalation of bitterness, and of counterterror.

Tois may have repercussions long after this particular dilemma has been resolved, one way or another. The conduct of the Israeli occupation of the lands overrun in 1967 has, all propaganda to the contrary notwithstanding, been humane and enlightened. No occupation force can be a pleasant neighbor; none can function without acts of force that are resented. But in this case, it was the occupation itself that formed the chief ground for resentment.

It was always doubtful how long this could last, in view of the violence promoted by the guerrillas, or how long the Israelis could justify their boast that they may have destroyed houses in the occupied zones, but did not execute people. The roundup of Arabs, reportedly as counter-hostages, however amply justified by the deeds of the Popular Front, harks back to sterner forms of occupation policy and is certain to leave its mark.

Thus the Popular Front has worsened, rather than improved, the condition of their brethren in Israel. Perhaps they planned it that way; after all, Arabs suspected of collaboration with Israel have always been the chief targets of commando violence on Israeli soil. It is an old revolutionary thesis that things have to be made worse before they can explode into a better world. But the nations that are trying to limit and defuse the explosive potential of the Middle East must act to do so now.

Vietnam: 'Cease-Fire' or 'Settlement'?

Any number of thoughtful (and not so thoughtful, people have decided that the best way to end the war is not Vietnamization, which only ends American participation, and still less victory or an abrupt and arbitrary withdrawal, but a standstill cease-fire. Some dozen senators of almost every political persuasion have pressed that proposition upon the President, prompted by some old Vietnam hands now out of the government and some prestigious voices in the press. Notwithstanding recent experience with this sort of thing in the Middle East, where the boundary lines are clearly fixed and violations readily detectable, the idea is earnestly put forward as the answer to everything: It would stop the shooting and therefore the bloodshed; it would far loose the impasse at Paris and lead inexorably to substantive talks about a real solution. It would do all this, it is argued by the more serious prononents, because it would oblige both sides, in working out the terms of a cease-fire and a standstill, to face up to the realities of the current balance of forces and effective control in South Vietnam. And this would lead logically to a realistic discussion of how political power would be parceled out in e final settlement.

So what the serious advocates are really proposing are not just means but ends as well and that, of course, is the rub. For you have only to look down the list of those senators who have endorsed the idea in a letter to President Nixon to know that Senators Mansfield and Goldwater and Jackson and Dole and Prouty and Scott could not possibly agree on the settlement they want in Vietnam, leaving aside whether the Nixon administration and the Thieu government and the North Vietnamese could all agree. This is precisely why the public discussion of a cease-fire in Vietnam has gotten nowhere: None of the participants is prepared to admit that when he is talking cease-fire he is really talking settlement. The proponents simply go on demanding that the administration try it, and the administration goes on saying that it has tried it-and they are talking about entirely different things. So the first step perhaps is to define what people mean when they say "cease-fire."

What the Nixon administration and the Thieu government mean is a cessation of hostilities, a kind of freeze in position, which means freezing Mr. Thieu in his position as president, and accepting, at least by implication, the writ of his government throughout the country until free elections establish some other regime. This is what has been "tried" and it should surprise nobody that it does not interest Hanoi very much. What other advocates of a cease-fire have in mind is something quite different: it too would freeze the situation but it would acknowledge Comunist control of those areas which are in fact beyond the effective control of the Saigon government. It would begin the process of parceling out ultimate power, and the sponsors of this approach make no secret of their belief that it would lead inevitably to some measure of Communist participation in the central government in Saigon, a coalition if you will.

Needless to say, not all the senators who signed the letter to Mr. Nixon would concede for a moment that they are proposing anything that could lead to a coalition government in Saigon, and their letter doesn't even suggest this. But the fact remains that this is what many backers of this move, including the men who drafted the letter, think would probably result from a standstill ceasefire of the sort they have in mind. It is what makes the idea appealing to such men as Cyrus Vance to name one who had a hand in shaping ; the whole point is that it would force a realistic acknowledgement of the actual state of affairs on the ground in the children was the pond South Vietnam.

So when you boil it all down, there is not much magic in this catch-all word "ceasefire" unless it comes accompanied by some explanation of what one is prepared to settle for in the end. This is not to say that it shouldn't be tried-only that it shouldn't be tried in a dishonest way, since it could be dangerous to initiate negotiations on the terms of a cease-fire without having to come to grips with the questions of terms for a settlement. It is hard enough to envisage a cease-fire, even if both sides could accept the principle. There are no front lines in this war; a heavy proportion of the casualties are inflicted by mines and booby traps; a large part of the conflict is psychologicaland how do you enforce a cessation of terroristic threats designed to condition men's plane's engines black streams of minds? If you can somehow cool the conflict in Vietnam, what about Cambodia? And what of the areas in that middle category that are controlled neither by Saigon or the Viet Cong, or are controlled by one during the day and the other at night? Finally, consider the possible impact on the war of merely negotiating over a standstill cease- even of industrial society that says fire based on actual conditions in specific hamlets, villages, districts and provinces. The incentive could be all the greater upon both sides to intensify the war in an effort to show who has the upper hand in Village X or District Y. Thus a proposition advanced in the interest of lowering the level of violence might well raise it, with all that this could mean for the pace of Vietnamization and American withdrawal.

The first question to be answered by those who would press this proposition on President Nixon, therefore, if they are really serious about it, is what they are prepared to accept in the way of final settlement terms that North Vietnam could reasonably be expected to accept.

that does not accept some variation on a coalition regime, some sharing of power, some achievement by both sides of some part of their original objectives. So there is much to be said for a standstill cease-fire, if the Sagon government can be persuaded to accept the idea and the Nixon administration can be persuaded to take the risks involved. The alternative is to proceed a steady rate with Vietnamization and A. :ican withdrawal from the war. There is a limit to what we can do for the Thieu goverment and, as we have repeatedly argued, v. have about reached that limit. If the Saigon regime wants to push on alone it is welcome to try. The worst course of all would be to tie ourselves tightly to the unrealistic settlement terms of a Saigon government that rejects the notion of a compromise settlement and expects us to hang around for as long as it takes to make sure that it won't have to compromise at all.

From the statements of the aged diplomatist it appears that King William was no more desirous of war than was Napoleon. It seems that the

Just then, shattering the fantasy of escape, a jet took off from the airport nearby and screamed overhead. The noise, coming suddealy into the country stiliness, was a physical assault. From the half-burned kerosene poured into the limnid air.

In that setting the impact of technology on the earthly environment was icily clear. So was the nature of the problem, the way of dealing with it: as a matter of choices, not inevitability.

There is no law of nature or we have to suffer jet-engine noise at a medically damaging level, or jet exhaust visibly fouling the air. We can impose and enforce restrictions on aircraft. Naturally, there will be a cost. Planes may have to be redesigned. They may carry fewer passengers, or fly more slowly. Feres may have to be

But we are not powerless. As a dumping of oil if we have theoretical gain in time and efficiency, we are not going to put up with airplanes that do us that much damage.

It is only a political problem. Only—there is the rub. It means taking on the airlines, and the airframe manufacturers, and the engine companies, and all the airport authorities and other aviation boosters, who quite properly have their constituencies. As the issue of the SST demonstrates, it means also taking on politicians and administrators whose concept of na-tional grandeur includes flying faster at any cost.

Other problems of technological pollution similarly pose economic and political choices. One that came into the consciousness of Americans this summer was

Solution Exists

All along the Atlantic coast, racationers found beaches covered with disfiguring splotches of oil. And it was not just one bad spill here or there. Through the summer, almost every tide left its black line on the sand. It seemed that we had reached a permanent condition of oil on the oceansconfirmation of Thor Heyerdahl's depressing observations as he crossed the Atlantic in his papyrus

Yet our increasing dependence on huge tankers does not mean that we have to accept the ruin of beaches, and ultimately the sea itself, as inevitable. We are quite able, technically, to police the tanker trade and prevent the people we can say, whatever the political determination to do so.

We know how to add trace chemicals to every cargo of oil so that any spill could be traced to its source. With or without international agreement, the United States could make such coding a legal condition for shipping oil to American ports-and could heavily penalize or exclude ships that dumped oil at sea.

Again, powerful interests would be inconvenienced. Do enough Americans care enough about the human and biological concerns involved to make political action possible?

These are simple, perhaps misleadingly simple, examples of the choices that environmentalists say are going to be forced upon us more and more. And always, we shall be able to protect our surroundings only at some cost in convenience or economy or speed. There are serious men who think the whole ideology of conworld will have to be transformed if the earth is to be saved from the devastating effects of productivity. We shall all have to stop expecting, and demanding, more goods every year. Some young people even foresee a return from industrialized production techniques to crafts.

Those are visions too distant for most of us to comprehend, much less to imagine the political means of reaching them. we are already, inescapably, in a time of practical choices between environmental and economic interests in multiplying situationschoices that will show whether we are ready to pay the price of WASHINGTON. - Circum- prepared to talk, the Israelis had stances led Israel to take a no incentive to advance terms. For our part, it is hard to see a settlement harsh line after the six-day war. So, to much of the world, it looklike a chauvinistic nation of conquering Jews determined to hold what they had even at the expense of world peace.

But recent Arab actions combined with the emergence of Moshe Dayan in Israel to change the aspect of things. The Israelis now have a golden opportunity to present their case in a way that commands the sympathy of fairminded men.

What chiefly caused the Israelis to look harsh was the outcome the six-day war. In the course of that brief conflict, the territory held by the Israelis was increased fourfold. Key trouble spots such as the Gaza Strip, the Strait of Tiran and the Golan Heights came under Israeli control.

Except for the city of Jerusalem and a part of the Golan Heights, the Israelis had no serious thought of annexing the occupied lands-if only because that would have meant importing an Arab fifth column into the Jewish state. But the Israeli regime tried to play it cute. Israeli officials took the line that they would withdraw only after the Arabs negotiated new and secure boundaries.

The Arabs, of course, refused to that the Israelis have genuine negotiate. The Israelis were thus reason to be concerned for their stuck with the role of occupying power. That role carried them into deeper waters. In the name of securing the occupation, they flew deep into Egypt and repeatedly hit Arab guerrilla forces in standing firm was seen to be untenable. That was the significance of the dropping of extreme hawks from the cabinet when the Israeli government accepted the cease-fire offer a month ago. In dealing with the violations of the cease-fire, moreover, Gen. Dayan has clearly emerged as Israel's leading political figure after Mrs. Meir. He won over the whole cabinet for the proposition that Israel should react very seriously to the violation of the cease-fire by Egypt. Now he is a leading advocate of resuming negotiations once the violations have been rectified. The hawk. in other words, has become solidly enough emplaced to begin to take dovish positions.

No doubt it is still not yet appropriate for the Israelis to spell out every jot and tittle of their terms of settlement. But the time is certainly ripe for a show of Israeli generosity. The world needs to be assured in the most unmistakable way that Israel does not mean to assert the right of conquest, that it is sensitive to the serious problems of the region. that it is alive to the need for meting out justice to Arab and

(This would, alasi have to apply as well to fleers from the Socialist heavens.) Such a measure would shed no blood and might pretty much remove air hijackings from the head-

But let's look at things squarely. The community of nations does not so far regard air piracy as intolersble, merely as bothersome. A measure such as the above still seems excessive. It would be unrealistic, therefore, to expect midair reroutings of planes, with at-tendant kidnappings, to grow less or in fact to cease growing, before five or ten years.

The latest hijacking of four planes is only the apotheosis of American policy in particular. and lumbered off.

Yes, he was a little thick around the middle and rather stupid looking, really. But day after day he hauled his own great bulk and his people and their belongings back and forth over the Atlantic, asking only to be shown where to go and what to do. That last landing on that short runway must have been tricky for a big fellow, but he managed that, too. A final gesture from a faithful machine, unknowing, unquestioning obedience. And they put black things in his body and under his brow and they blew his brow apart and his wings cracked and fell to the ground and he was left to the flames. Pictures of his charred remains were sent all over the world. "In retaliation for U.S. aid to Israel..." He wouldn't have understood the Middle East situation, but he died wondering why no one even tried to put out the fire.

What Happened in Brussels

Yesterday [Sept. 11] yo paper asserted [in an Associated Press report! that I and a group of "hippies" had been "thrown out" of a church by local Belgian residents. The story is totally false, and badiy misinforms your readers about an important international congress. No one threw anyone from the church, and the enthusiasm and ccoperation of the residents of Brussels has been excellent.

I enclose a statement issued by the congress which describes what actually occurred. HARVEY COX. Ph. D.

Professor of Divinity, Harvard University Combridge, Mass. The statement:

The Incident of the Capuchin Church On Wednesday evening, Sept. 9.

an incident occurred in the Capuchin Church. Place du Jeu de Balle. Brussels, which because of inerg. ficient information, produced varied reactions in public opinion. It is essential to describe as clearly as possible what really happened and to put the incident back in its proper place in the context of the Society and Conflict" congress which is being held in the Marolles quarter.

What Was Supposed to Happen

When taking the responsibility of organizing a convention with the theme of "holiday (feast, and war" (la fête et la guerre), the American Protestant theologian Harvey Coa Harvard professor, intended to hold a meeting of prayer and discussions. He was to talk at the meeting and get a debate under way. In order to express through music and mime the theme of feasts and wars, he got the help from an American composer of religious music and a few of his colleagues, as well as from the B. wegings Theater" from Amsterdam. thus renewing the tradition of the mysteries of the Middle Aces.

What Did Happen The meeting did not work out according to schedule. Two principal factors contributed to this. A group of contestants, calling themselves anarchists, infiltrated the meeting. Certain members took hold of the microphone, insulting Canon Houtert, blaming the congress for the place it accorded (gave) to the theme "man and transcendency (supereminence)", and accusing it of being a revival of contestant movements by clerical and bourgeols groups. At the same time (simultaneously), a group... which had not at all been requested to participate, disturbed the initiative of the musicians and the Bewegings Theater. Under these difficult circumstances Harvey Cox tried to put through the dialogue (discussions) and to recommence the already started meeting. Since he had no organs, he did not succeed. It was then that an inhabitant of the quarter showed his anger because of what was happening in his church. The public left the church little by little and the church was restored to order by the members of the congress. It does not seem the incident could have been avoided. Firstly, a church is a place open to all. Secondly, these Christians, having accepted to participate in a meeting with the possibility of a debate on the subject of "Man and transcendency", had no reason whatsoever to avoid such a debate, even in difficult circumstances. The Importance of the Incident One should not attach to this incident a meaning it did not have. As shown in the description of the facts, the organizers of the congress were not overwhelmed. They deliberately avoided a brutal confrontation which could have provoked a violent opposition of forces. It certainly was not a matter of wanting to provoke a shock among population of the quarter. shock caused by the incident has been for many of the me of the convention the subject of personal meditation and discussion groups went deeper into the subject all during the next day.

Illegal Guns Widespread In the U.S.

Firearms Control Still Bitter Political Issue

By Michael Knight

NEW YORK (NYT).—Two years

ifter the enactment of landmark con-control legislation, the regulaion of private firearms remains a sitterly controversial political issue and local officials across the counry complain that filegal gun posassion is as widespread as ever:

Gun clubs and other groups that ppose gun control in almost any form have mounted carefully planred, well-financed campaigns in idontana, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Maryland in retaliation against senstors who have gone on record and Maryand in retaliation against enators who have gone on record in favor of gun control. While all four of their targets—sens. Mike Mansfield, D., Mont., flugh Scott, R., Pa., Philip Hart, D., Mich., and Joseph D. Tydings, D., Md.—are confident that they are strong enough to withstand the ittacks, rhetoric has been sharp and at least one, Sen. Tydings, has add to contend with stremous opposition from a citizens' group reavily staffed by gun-club officials.

In rural areas, politicians conider gun control anathema. Gale Villiams, a downstate Illinois legslator sponsoring a bill that would et individual counties nullify a tate gun-control law, says his onstituents are "violently opposd" to any legal restraint on firetures.

"They either think it's another orm of taxation or a plot by the Communists to take their guns way," he said.

Meanwhile, almost anyone can egally buy a gun—including a $12.-8 Mannlicher Carcano rifle of the ype that killed President Kennedy, a $265.85 Remington deer file like that used to kill the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King jr., and a $6 Iver Johnson pistol of the kind that killed Sen. Robert F. Kennedy.

And local officials report, former convicts, children, narcotics addicts, mental patients, almost anyone can obtain weapons illegally—even in states with strict laws.

"It is perfectly obvious that fllegal gun possession is rampant," says Stephen C. Swaim, secretary of the District of Columbia City Council. "It is perfectly obvious to the average citizen that guns are all over the place."

Despite Treasury Department figures released last month showing a threefold increase in the number of arrests for violations of the 1968 federal gun control law, the number of guns and of crimes committed with guns continues to prosent

More than 100 million firearms are thought to be in private hands in this country, dwarfing the armed forces arsenal of 4.8 million small arms. Ghetto riots, crime waves and talk of new gun-control legislation regularly send the buying rate skyrocketing, making firearms a $350-million-a-year in-

The federal law requires licenses for gun dealers, outlaws mail order sales, and requires that a purchaster register and buy only in his two state or in bordering states awing reciprocal agreements. Dealers may not sell to convicted felons, persons under felony indictants, mental incompetents, narratics addicts, soldiers discharged is honorably, aliens living here illerally, persons who have renounced their critizenship, and users of naripuana. Local laws are often similar.

Flaws in Laws

The nation's 2.000 federal, state and local gun laws were intended to keep guns out of the hands of changle and cut down the number of crimes committed with guns. But even supporters acknowledge that the laws suffer from two basic exceptual flaws.

Nothing in them can prevent the owner of a gun from using it to commit a crime, or giving it to smeone who might commit a crime. And no law can compel a triminal to give up or register a sun he owns illegally, a point often made by the National Rifle Association in arguing against gun control laws.

A favorite example cited by hose who see the gun laws as a lailure is the 22-calibrer pistol used to assassinate Sen. Kennedy. It was purchased legally and registered by a 72-year-old Californian, who gave it to his daughter, who gave it to her neighbor, who is turn sold it to Munir Sirhan, who lent it to his brother, Sirhan Sirhan, who killed Sen. Kennedy, Considerations of this kind, prompted the President to call for confiscation of all personal firearms as the only real solution to

But such proposals encounter strong opposition that draws heavily upon attitudes formed when the country was being settled and a gun was a daily necessity. A constitutional provision states: "A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed."

Mini-Scandal

While people gradually are becoming used to female faces in the Bundestag, they still have fixed notious about what their owners must wear, as a mini-scandal last spring in Bonn demonstrated. Social-Democrat representative Lenelotte von Bothmer appeared at a parliamentary meeting in "an elegant beige-colored (slack-suit) combination." as the press described it. Earlier, Richard Jaeger, vice-president of the Bundestag and a member of the Christian Social Union, had said he would refuse to let a lady speak before the house in slacks. Mr. Jaeger held his tongue, but the public did not. with mail. One outraged citizen wrote: "Poor Germany, how low you have sunk, you and your red party-women.

On the bench, the situation is much the same as in government. There are only a handful of women judges. Yet one of the country's leading spokesmen for criminal reform is a woman public prosecutor. And West Germany now has a woman prison director. In juvenile courts, the law provides that an equal number of men and women make up the jury, a right harvested by the feminists of the '20s.

Working Permit There is a quaint paragraph permitted to work only if such work does not conflict with their marital and child-raising duties. This has a double edge. First, it chides the woman who does not see her calling at the hearth, and second, it casts a stigma on those women who can't afford to comply.

"The doll's house given to the little girl for Christ-

In thy case, more figures on how many women hold jobs are no sure index of female emanicipation. Not only do economic conditions and social position, as well as age and marital status, determine the number, but the number itself says little about the true state of affairs. The fact that at the beginning of the century as many women held jobs as do today should serve as a warning about what statistics can

Women make up 37 percent of the working population and these constitute about 31 per-cent of the total female population. However, there are hardly any women in top manage-ment. In radio, television and theater, there is not one woman director. The usual reason given is that women lack the littik-kime experience necessary for top jobs. This is convincing as only circular reasoning can

Theory vs Practice

There is much talk about new areas of jobs for women as a result of technology. And in theory all kinds of work are

In practice, however, most women work at jobs that require little or no training. Even where women are considered (perhaps wrongly) as more competent than then, they get paid less. Employers get around the many laws and stipulations laid down in the constitution guaranteeing equal pay for equal work by means of the so-called easy work wage" alibi.

For example, in an automobile factory, men will polish the foof of a car, women the doors. The men are paid more. Why? Because it takes more pressure to polish a roof than a door. The absurdity of the argument does not prevent its widespread application. In general, women are paid 20 to 30 percent less than men for the same work. At the root of this situation power. This may explain why they are expected to enter a field like psychology. Two capable psychologists I know stopped work at the insistence of their husbands. In one case, the husband, a young physics professor, wanted his wife to stay at home in order to produce, at the rate of one a year, his "happy breed." The other husband, also a man of high achievement and success himself, was allegedly worried about the asocial contacts his wife might make in the course of her work. No wonder doctors see the danger of increased impotence in men along with increased aggressiveness in career

The academic world itself mirrors the male anxiety. At West Germany's 48 institutions of higher learning, only 6 percent of the staff are women. Less than 1 percent ever get to be full professors with department chairs. The feudal system of appointment, under heavy fire by student protest groups, is particularly tough on women. As for the German radical student organizations, their girls ended by revolting, as in England and the United States, against the treatment they got from the men. The girls were sick and tired of making coffee and emptying ashtrays under the banner of revolution.

No Musical Chairs

Why are there no women concert masters in any of Germany's leading orchestras, and only a handful of women players hidden away in the back rows? What a Cinderella tale when compared to the orchestras of Leonard Bernstein and the late Sir John Barbirolli, Yet girls, adhering to still another cliché-image, flock to the conservatories and art academies. Where do all the lady virtuosi go? They cannot all

An island sanctuary for women does seem to be the press. Die Zeit, one of Germany's leading weeklies, has a woman of great authority as its editorin-chief. A considerable number of big papers have regular columns by women, and nearly all have women's pages, edited by women. These pages show a marked trend in recent months away from kitsch and kinder and towards a re-defining of women's role in society. One big difference between Germany's nascent liberation drive and the feminist movement of the Twenties is that the latter saw female emancinstion in a program of career as in that order. Whether a woman can work variety of things, economic conditions, for one. Obviously, in times of relatively high unemployment, it will be harder for a woman to get part-time work. But more important today is society's approval and willingness to help. Not a scarcity of work possibilities, but a scarcity of child-oare facilities keeps two-thirds of all married women, and 85 parcent of the mothers with children under 14, prisoners in their own four There are not nearly enough kindergartens or other child-care facilities to cover the present need. In middle and large-sized cities many more children are turned down than fied personnel as well as lack of funds is responsible. Subjective Obstacles can be admitted. Lack of quali-

These are objective obstacles. On the subjective score, great chasms yawn. A middle-class woman who goes out to work is considered somewhat déna-ture. Add to the social pressures (real or imagined), her long-cultivated passivity, and it soon becomes clear why 85 percent stay home.

Passivity itself may cover a lot of deep misgivings. After all, how can a woman be sure she is not going from the frychanging one kind of drudgery for another? Today's work world is largely unimaginative. Male norms prevail. And a mere glance at the comparative statistics on longevity and heart ailments for men and women could be enough to make a woman think twice before embarking on a grand career.

Both women who do and women who do not work are filled with resentments and ambivalence. They view each other with a cold eye. Each would like to have her cake and eat it too. Out of the frustrations and resentments that come from being tied to a carpetbeater, strange compensations and a grotesque ideology has grown. Witness the hordes of hausfrauen who crusade each day to the nearest coffee house for their ration of gooey cake topped with whipped cream and Village gossin.

Mission Accomplished

The trouble is housework has no economic value; you can't buy anything for it; it affords no status feelings, no prestige, To make up for this, German housewives have developed a sense of mission, of martyrdom even, in performing heir tasks. Scrubbing and polishing take on the frenzy of obsession. Family and fatherland become fig-leaves to conceal the empti-ness of their lives.

This is not to say that there are no women who really enjoy their household tasks or get deep satisfaction from raising their children. Of course there are, but for them, as for the rest, traditional German society fails to provide genuine incentives and a basis for self-respect. A nice measure of the social status of women is reflected in the adjunct Frau or Fraulein, In 1869, the Prussian minister of the interior ruled that the designation - "Frau" could be applied to single women only as a title of nobility or as a token of royal favor. Shortly before World War II. mothers of illegitimate children were allowed to call themselves Frau. And on July 1, 1979, a lay went into effect protecting the legal rights of illegitimate children, and thereby, their mothers. In 1955, in answer to feminist demands, the word From was admitted in legal documents for all adult females. Today every adult woman can ask to be Nevertheless, if you want tervice in a restaurant, you call out, "Fraulein." If you want the waiter to come you must tan "Herr Ober," (short for Mr. Headwaiter), thus flattering the merest boy, while dealgrating possibly semebody's grandloosening up West German soclety in general, and furthering women's rights in particular. are the new proposed divorce and abortion laws, expected to be passed this year of next. The new divorce law will disregard the question of guilt and will require each party to be financially self-supporting, although special provision will be made for older women who have learned no profession and for the care of children, as well as to prevent poverty. The proposed abortion law would permit termination of early pregnancy on demand. Abortion with the consent of a medical jury would be allowed in other cases.

Loosening up outside the law is evident in the growing number of communes, experiments in communal living based on Swedish models. Up to now, ful here. People whose ento tions have been schooled in a traditional acciety are a bit like tigers raised in the 200. Drop them down in the jungle and they are goners. All in all, a lot of ljustment

Will be needed if the incipient changes are not to end in more frustrations. Actually, the women's liberation movement in West Germany aims less at changing role images than in improving conditions for women. True, the more women take on men's jobs and vice versa (male midwives), the more blurred become their sexual roles, and the old male-female antitheses are on the wane. In Germany as in the United States and elsewhere, the young preach a new code: thou shalt enjoy. And yet, Germany is a country with a deep patriarchal beritage. Her Fräulein-Wunder may be topss, but under her skin are the ten layers of muslin petticeats she has always worn. You can see what you look for. It's all and spent an evening singing songs with Charles Aznavour. Mr. Segal takes his running as seriously as his writing. "I was on the New England championship cross-country Harvard team, 1957," he said proudly, while slipping into a pavy blue sweatsuit in the Bois de Vin-

"Jazy was my hero for years. I followed him in l'Equipe. To think I had to write a best seller to run with a champion. It's a power of art."

Mr. Jazy was amused, friendly but less bubbly. "He could run much better if he didn't talk all the time," he said drily, But Mr. Segal Ukes it that way. "Running is a great way to start a friendship." he said. "It gives you something in

His friendship with Aznavour dates way back. The two look so much alike that "people used to stop me in the street and say: 'Here's Aznavour'."
Mutual friends introduced them in New York years ago.

They have the same small, nervous build. Same carefully intelligent eyes. Same olive skin the French invariably associate with crise de foie. And same faux-dur (tough outside, soft inside: approach to women. "It's even more than looks." Mr. Segal admitted. "It's a matter of attitudes." Like Aznavour, Mr. Segal cocks his head to one side and talks with authority and with his hands.

Françoise bagan rang him up. "I loved 'Love Story,' " she said. "Would you come to the dress rehearsal of my play tonight." Mr. Segal found La Sagan "very nice." He was flattered because many French critics said they write alike. Like "Bonjour Tristesse," "Love Story" is a thin story told on a simple, almost flat key. A classic boy-mests-girl-and-she-dies-at-the-end affair, it is a miracle of nuances and has everybody, but everybody, crying at the end.

The French show every sign of loving the book as much as the Americans. The critics have idolized Mr. Segal all week long, hailed him as a new romantic (a revolution of sorts) and his easy manner, winner's smile and fluent French have

LES BIENHEUREUX DE LA DESOLATION By Herve Bazin. Seuü. 246 pp. 20 francs ($3.83).

Reviewed by Marc Slonim

A of the Academie Goncourt, "Les Bienheureux de La Désolation," stands out as the most original work of French fiction in an otherwise undistinguished season. Based on fact, this adventure story, skillfully fit into the framework of a philosophical tale, deals with the small British island of Tristan da Cunha in the South Atlantic, far away from the maritime routes between the Cape and Montevideo. A volcanic eruption in 1961 forced the evacuation of its 264 inhabitants to England. Until then, these trappers, cowherds, fishermen and their wives had led a hard, primitive, healthy existence, protected from the temptations of civilization, receiving news from the outside world only a few times a year.

Upon arrival in England they were brutally exposed to modern industry, technology and politics, and the experience proved shocking and painful to them. Despite governmental and private efforts to resettle the immigrants and provide them with jobs, the Tristans, as the press called them, could not adjust to their new environment. Curiously enough, they were not much perplexed by technological progress, which they explained in their own terms: "A plane," they said, "flew just like a bird, and movie and television images simply flashed before the eye like running clouds, animals or men." But they could not understand how or why these wonders had been invented.

On the other hand, they were disgusted by the noise and crowds of the cities, the poor quality of work produced by negligent labor, and the crime and disorder they read about in the newspapers. The ironic and humorous description of the Tristans' confrontation with contemporary reality is one of the strongest elements of the novel: conceived as satire, it soon becomes an indictment. The Tristans had but one wish: to return to their innocent Paradise. Only a few, entangled in new loves, consented to remain in England; the rest managed to obtain permission from the Colonial Office to return to their homes in 1964. Tristan da Cunha had been devastated by volcanic blasts, and the natives' superhuman efforts to rebuild their village seemed futile at first. After initial failure, the settlers devised a compromise: "We learned a great deal during the four years of exile," says one of the elders. "We were right to ing as we are, but we also understand that we can take from your civilization just what we need in our struggle against the blind forces of nature—and nothing more. We must be ourselves in 1967 and not try to go back to our forebears of 1800, but we are going to use

NEW novel by Hervé Bazin technology for a different way of life."

When Bazin visited Tristan da Cunha, he found there tools and machines, electrical installations and modern equipment which helped restore the colony on the rocky island. But this evolution, as he calls it, from seal oil to Standard Oil, has not affected the spirit of a cooperative, egalitarian community that refuses to admit huxury into its households or ambition into its social activities.

Bazin's vision of the Tristans is neither a Utopia in the tradition of Rousseau nor a model for universal imitation. Too intelligent a writer to preach a single road to salvation, he is fully aware that the Tristans' happiness is the result of exceptional physical and historical circumstances, reinforced by strong tribal ties within a small. sternly moral democraticali; inclined group. But his novel indirectly poses many questions about our own complex society.

In an article tomorrow. Mr. Slonim will discuss "German mini-fiction," and "Soriet satire." Mr. Slonim's European Notebook is a regular feature in the New York Times literary supplement.

Says Men's Slam Unlikely

Rosewall Praises Today's Stars

FOREST HILLS, N.Y., Sept. 14
(AP).—The men's grand slam may playing very well, and—boom—Rod never be duplicated again in this age of big money and high-pressure tennis, says the new U.S. Open champion, Ken Rosewall.

"It would really be a feat for tennis, says the new U.S. Open champion, Ken Rosewall.

"I don't say it's impossible for one man to win the four major championships again, but I think it is very unlikely," the 35-year-old Sydney stylist said after beating another Australian, Tony in 1962 and then as a professional is final, and now Rosewall is U.S. champion again, having beaten Newcombe in the semi-finals.

"It would really be a feat for it would really be a feat for a man to make the grand slam under the present conditions," Rosewall sittle. He won the crown at the age of 21 in 1956.

"I doubt if anyone will ever win a big title that many years apart again, either," Rosewall said.

McLaren Team Loses Can-AmRace

By John S. Radosta

GAINESVILLE, Ga., Sept. 14 (NYT).-Tony Dean of England, driving a second-hand, three-liter Porsche 908, yesterday won the Road Atlanta Can-Am. It was like a demolition derby and was by far the wildest of the 36 Can-Am races that have been run since this competition began in 1966. And it was a victory so surprising that Dean himself was surprised.

After all, since when does the McLaren team, led by Denis Hulme and Peter Gethin, lose a Can-Am race?

This was the first time in 20 races—since Oct. 13, 1968—that one of the bright orange McLaren cars had not won.

There were 16 accidents—four collisions and 12 spinouts—but no injuries other than bumps,

It was an extraordinary race in which four leaders—Hulme, Peter Gethin, Peter Revson and George Eaton—were knocked out by accidents. And Gethin, after recovering the lead, was eliminated again by a broken gearbox.

Davi Causer of Carmel, Ind., ran second in a Lou-Chevrolet. Lothar Motschenbacher, who has driven in every Can-Am race since 1966, finished third in a McLaren-Chevrolet. Oscar Kovelski of Scranton, Pa., was fourth and Roger McCaig of Scarborough, Ontario, fifth. Dean's purse was $16,450. Today's Can-Am, seventh of this season's ten-race series for group seven sports-racing cars, was the opening event of a new road course, Road Atlanta, a $1.3 million facility in the Georgia hills 40 miles north of Atlanta.

With all the good cars out of contention the field was left open to a collection of usual back-runners that normally have no chance to do anything but pick up a few dollars by simply finishing. That has been Dean's style in the last two seasons-to tool around the course minding his own business and husbanding his

Yesterday the difference was that enough leaders knocked themselves out. Dean had only to stay clear of the wreckage. His best previous finish in a Can-Am was a fourth place at Bowmanville, Ontario, in June.

Dean, a 38-year-old used-car dealer, bought his Porsche 908 second-hand and he has been racing it with his own money and no spon-sorship. With his three-liter engine, he triumphed over a field of cars with engines of seven and eight liters.

Dean covered the 190 miles-75 laps of the circuit—in one hour 49 minutes 46.88 seconds for an average speed of 103.45 miles an hour. His lead over Causey was 72 seconds.

Nicklaus 32 On Last 9 Wins Series

136 Total Beats Stockton, Casper

By Lincoln A. Werden

AKRON, Ohio, Sept. 14 (NYT). For a brief spell, Jack Nicklaus and Dave Stockton were all even yesterday in the World Series of golf. Then Nicklaus came back in 32 for a 70 and swept off with the $50,000 first prize with a 36-hole total of 136.

Stockton, the professiona! Golf-ers Association champ, finished with a one-under-par 62 for 139 to tie Billy Casper, the Masters champion. Each received $11,250. The fourth contender in this spe-cial event, Tony Jacklin of England, who holds the United States Open title, also had a 76 over the Firestone Country Club course for a two-day aggregate of 141. Jacklin's share of the purse was

Although the 66 by Nicklaus Saturday enabled him to enjoy a three-stroke edge over Stockton beginning vesterday's session, there were some tense moments during the front nine this afternoon. An incredible shot by Stockton with a No. 7 iron at the 450-yard third hole buoyed the PGA champion's hopes. His second shot struck the surface of the pond guarding the green, skipped once to the bank and rolled on to within ten feet of the flagstick.

"Unbelievable," said one gal-leryite. Another recalled the famous lily pad shot of Bobby Jones in the 1930 Open, when his ball struck a pond close to a growing plant and bounded out to safety. Stockton sank a par four

Following the fourth and deeraine race of the series to de-clide whether the Australian 1 ht. Gretel II, or the French yecht. France, would challenge for the America's Cup, Baron Microel L. Bich, France's owner and her skipper in that race, protested bitterly that the race should have been canceled because of the heavy jog that settled over the course off Newport. The three-nation International Race Committee, under whose direction these trials were conducted, responded to the baron's criticism a few days later in a story provided to The New York Times (IHT, Sept. 3). Baron Bich has stated his position in the following letter to The Times:

To the Editor: My attention has been called to the press interview of Commodore Horn published in the Sept. 2, 1970, issue of The New York Times [IHT, Sept. 3], Instead of using the press to make public intemperate and libelous attacks against me personally, he should have confined his remarks to an objective discussion of my claim that the International Race Committee has failed to comply with the applicable rules. That is the least that one might expect from a member of a quasi-judi-

Commodore Horn asserts that there is nothing in the "Conditions" governing the race which would permit the committee to stop a race once it has started. although failing to mention that there is one thing in the "Conditions" to prevent the committee from canceling a race after the starting signal. Article 10 of the "Conditions" incorporates by reference all the racing rules of the New York Yacht! Club which are not inconsistent with them, including among others Rule, 5 (b) of the racing rules which reads as cial body of sportsmen.

"1. The Race Committee: (b) after the starting signal may shorten the course by finishing a race at any rounding mark or cancel or aban-cutter, Commodore Horn's attempt to place the responsibility of not stopping the race upon the United States Coast Guard comes with particular ill-grace. The duty of supervision and decision was en-trusted to the International Committee, not the United States Coast Guard, whose function is merely to render as-

Commodore Horn's denial that the International tee had sent any radio message to the yacht tenders indicating the position of the competing yachts is contrary to the reports of completely reliable people who were present at the race. The denial ignores the very radio message sent on order of the committee's chairman, Dr. Croce, to the tender Cheetah, instructing the latter to inform France that she was in a 180 degree direction off the line.

Commodore Horn implies that my complaint was attributable to my lack of experience as a navigator. My own qualifications as a navigator are not m issue since, as Commodore Horn should know, the responsibility of navigation of France had been entrusted to Eric Tabarly, whose worldwide fame as a navigator speaks for itself. Commodore Horn's statement that I have to learn "how to behave like a gentleman instead of a spoiled child" is libelous. I did not protest the committee's decision that Gretel II had won the race. My complaint did not represent a question of manners. I raised a question of the application of the governing rules to dangerous sailing conditions.

An objective review of the record should lead Commodore Horn to a retraction of his re-marks and a public apology, which would avoid any necessity of further action on my part to seek redress.

PARIS.—"Who cares who killed Roger English-speaking world once asked. The short answer is: eight or ten million people who never heard of Edmund Wilson. The long answer follows.

The real perpetrator of "The Murder of Roger Ackroyd" (whether or not Mr. Wilson cares) was, of course, Agatha Christie. The amount of blood and ink she has spilled in the half-century or so since her crime debut must be incalculable, but it is a safe bet that almost nobody has spilled more. This bloodthirsty Englishwoman, who celebrates her 80th birthday Tuesday, has just published her 60th mystery novel ("Passenger to Frankfurt." Collins, 25 shillings). When "Roger Ackroyd" bit the dust, people like Proust, Lawrence, Arnold Bennett, and Kipling were still alive and well (the latter adverb does not apply to Proust, who was never well).

To return to Edmund Wilson and his put-down: If they didn't care about Roger Ackroyd, she made them care. ## Agatha Christie at 80

Ackroyd?", the greatest critic in the

they did care, right from the beginning, Her first book was actually "The "Murder in Mesopotamia." "Death on the Sparkling Cyanide."-the list goes on Blue Train," which the bloodthirsty octovenarian (then a bloodthirsty quadri-genarian) wrote in 1928:

Chapter I The Man With the White Hair li was close on midnight when a man crossed the Place de la Con-corde. In spite of the handsome fur coat which garbed his meager form.

there was something essentially weak and paltry about him.

A little man with a face like a rat . . . His father had been a Polish Jew. a journeyman tailor . . . One does not have to be a Polish Jew the worst kind, in the opinion of German Jews) to get one's guard up at this point. But, in fairness, let us say that Miss Christie may simply have shared in the prejudices of that time and place, and read on:

. . . The electric light was shaded with dirty pink festoons, and it coffened, but could not disguise, the girl's face with its mask of crude paint. Could not disguise either, the broad Mongolian east of her countenance. There was no doubt of Olaa Demiroif's profession, nor of her nationality, "All is well, little one?"

"All is well, Boris Iranovitch." No one wants to be rude to an octogenarian institution, but what have we here? Well, among other things, an echo of another, earlier English phenomenon among mystery writers, a man who was curding blood before Agatha Christie was born and who, since he lived until 1932, was still dominating the world of literary crime when "The Mystery of the Blue Train' was published: Edgar Wallace. Wallace was a hack but a hack with immense energy. He made a great deal of money and the lessons of his career were not lost on his younger contemporaries.

As "The Blue Train" fades into the distance, let us, to be charitable, skip 37 years, and a couple of million words, and take a lock at a 1965 model Christie, "At Bertram's Hotel"

SITUATIONS WANTED

AMERICAN-PRENCH, 1907, bilingual sec-

Chapter I In the heart of the West End, there are many quiet pockels, un-known to almost all but taxi drivers who traverse them with expert knowledge, and arrive triumphantly there-by at Park Lane, Berkeley Square or South Audley Street.

. . . There had, of course, been many other hotels on the model of Bertram's. Some still existed, but Bertram's. Some still existed, but nearly all had felt the wind of change . . . Outside the steps that led up to the big swing doors stood what at first sight appeared to be no less than a Field-Marshal . . . He received you with tender concern as you emerged . . guided you care-jully up the steps and piloted you through the silently suinging door-

Do doorways swing, by the way, even in Swinging London? Anyway, there is probably no reason to labor the point that Miss Christie is not, and never has been, much of a stylist. Her books, in fact, are a mother-lode of cliches, non-images, slapdash syntax. Her admirers would probably reply that any idiot knows you don't read Agaths Christie for style or syntax. You read her for-what? For the best Chinesepuzzle-type mystery plots in the business with the possible exception of John Dickson Carr's).

But, a carper might say, is that enough? Obviously it is, for millions of people, for two or three generations. For some other people it isn't, and never has been. These are the people who don't give a damn what the second footman was doing in the billiard room in Chapter Three. These are the people who would swap you 80 Agatha Christies for 12 John Dickson Carrs, for six Dorothy Sayerses, three Dashiell Hammetts, or one Rex Stout.

But, anyway, happy birthday, Agatha Christie, and thank you for having given an immense amount of picasure to an extraordinary number of people (not including, of course, Edmund Wilson).

PEOPLE:

Summer slips away. The sun glides toward its semi-annual rendezvous with the equator seven days hence, leaving in its wake a trickle of reluctant tourists and a hemisphere of semi-sweet souvenirs. In Italy. Carl Gustav has wen the jet set's annual "prince-of-the-season" award for reasons best expressed by the Rome daily Momento Sera. The helr to the Momento sera. The near to the Swedish throne, reports M.S., was far and away "the most sought after person" on the Costa 'Smeralda, the plush resort area developed by the Aga Khan in Sardinia, during the prince's prolonged sojourn 2s guest aboard the yacht of industrialist Annibale Scotti.

"He is unlike the others." says Momento Sera's socialite columnist Olghina de Robilant, as quoted by the AP. "He is unlike those boys such as Constantine the exiled Greek king; or Don Juan (the heir to the Spanish throne), who have been brought up scrupulously for 'The Role,' the ceremonial, the tradition, the self-restraint... Constan-tine and Don Juan impose on you a bow even if they are swimming at sea [sometimes known as 'the bends']. Carl Gustav does not. A familiar approach is spontaneous with

"If he is struck by something," continues the columnist, "he shows it without any reticence, and if he is amused he shows it by throwing his head backward. He likes to dance—obviously because he is an excellent dancer-and he likes to love. This latter virtue won him an enviable reputation in the circles of the most experienced lovers around the

"Relations with him," concludes Olghina, "are as simple as those one can have with the son of the doorkeeper. He does not stand all the time. He lies down when he feels like down it, and everyone is thankful to him for this."

When scouting a prospective summer hideaway, some seek the "in" places, others the "out." perhaps in keeping with their own social status though one often suspects the controry. Then there are those who take the middle ground. Trib columnist and author Ire Marder for instance, citing Biarric as an cample, fancies the once
